Objects for...and Other Things Phyllida Barlow By John Wood Mark Godfrey

Although this monograph focuses on the sculpture, installations, drawings and writings of Phyllida Barlow it also provides an opportunity to chart the vagaries of sculpture, since the 1960s, which Barlow has witnessed, been influenced by and critical of. Her work consists predominantly of large, three dimensional installations in which the use of space--and our relationship to it--plays an important role. As if watching a play unfold on stage, the viewer witnesses the work and its carefully constructed plot.

Editorial Review

Review

"My intentions are to activate a space through representing an equivalent drama as generated by human relationships; to create a difficult longing between two or more three objects within a space. I want the objects to take ownership of the space indicating a parasite/host encounter between the two, but where space of object can be either parasite or host and where each retains its autonomy."
